Teaching Philosophy	I believe that students will learn best through the integration of both book knowledge and hands on skill. Students acquire knowledge in the classroom and should be allowed the opportunity to experience what they learned in a hands on, clinical setting. This way, they will have practical experience and knowledge rather than just memorized facts. My job is to help students have the "I finally get it" moment through this integrated approach.
Bio	Aimee Mattox has been a Certified Athletic Trainer for 7 years. Her clinical experience includes high school, clinic, arena football and collegiate club sports settings. During this time, she has served as a preceptor for approximately 40 athletic training students. She was an adjunct instructor at the UL Lafayette before accepting the Athletic Training Clinical Educational Coordinator position during summer 2014. Mrs. Mattox is married to Matthew Mattox, who is the Coordinator of The Learning Center at UL Lafayette.
